

The Editor goes on to say: "The whole affair was intended to operate upon the Virginia Elections which commence the ensuing week."

Now this caps the climax of inconsistency. Mr. Van Buren writes a letter, which the Carolinian pronounces "rank abolition," "to operate on the Virginia elections." Verily if such be the fact, he is less entitled to be styled the "magician," than we had supposed him to be, and we learn too, for the first time that the advocacy of "rank abolition" was the proper way to "operate upon the Virginia elections" so as to secure the ascendancy of the advocate. Virginia will no doubt consider herself highly complimented by the Carolinian.

The contested election, between JAMES GRAHAM, and Gen. DANIEL NEWLAND, for the 12th Congressional District, in North Carolina, after having occupied a large portion of the attention of Congress for the last three months, has finally been decided by that body, by a rejection of the claims of both gentlemen. The decision has satisfied neither of them. The election goes back to the people.

VIRGINIA—The Governor of this State, the Hon. L. W. TAKEWELL, has resigned his office. This event took place on the 31st ult. The Governor it seems had made up his mind, immediately on the adoption of the Expunging resolutions, by the Legislature to resign, but he determined, also, that the State should be nearly a year without a Governor, by withholding his resignation till after the adjournment of that body, thus depriving the representatives of the people from choosing one to supply his place. He could not in our opinion have chosen a method better calculated to exhibit his contempt of the people and their representatives, and he will, with this party, whose organ he was, doubtless be remembered by them, during the present month, in a strong expression of condemnation through the ballot box.

Extract of a letter to the Editor, dated WASHINGTON, March 29.

"You see the Senate have fixed the 23d of May for their adjournment. If that day should be sanctioned by the House of Representatives there is two thirds of the present session of Congress already past. And what (it is very natural to enquire) has been done? The answer to this question, I feel no desire to make, the public journals answer it in my opinion, in a way not very creditable to our country. Long speeches about any thing and every thing, daily squabbles in the House; Representatives about points of order, a constant springing of party politics on the current business of Congress, constitute, with scarcely any exception, the daily record of what I read of in Congressional proceedings." Arguing from what we know, to what we do not know, or in other words, making the last four months of the present session of Congress a known quantity of a very simple rule of common arithmetic; we easily run to the 23d May, and see what will be done by the present Congress. Thus I am sure you will agree with me in saying, is not "a consummation devoutly to be wished?" Whose fault is it that things move on thus untowardly? your friends here, say it is the fault of the opposition. I charge neither side. But I am sure the people will not be satisfied with the result. Senator Benton said, however, the last time I was at the Capitol, that now that the Administration had the majority in both Houses of Congress, that things should go on better. That the public business should no longer stand still. That every man should "toe the mark." I sincerely hope he will make his promise good. But really from the Missouri Senator's known opinion of the importance of his own expunging resolutions, and the example he has set of making a two day's speech on them, I am afraid things will not go on much better, now that he has got every thing in the way he would have it. I presume the residue of the session in the Senate will be devoted mainly to the discussion of these resolutions."

NOTE.—Our readers will not require us to say that the writer of the above letter is somewhat deeply imbued with the virus of whiggery. If it were not so he would scarcely ask whose fault it is, that the business of Congress proceeds so untowardly. Our correspondent says he charges "neither side," an evidence of his justice which few of the opposition imitate. He cannot with propriety charge the Administration with the fault, because it does not belong to them, and he will not, of course, charge his brethren the Whigs with this evil. The "daily squabbles" of which he speaks, relative to points of order, are nearly all raised, with scarcely an exception by the opposition, and these squabbles are raised for no other purpose than to effect delay, so as to give the minority an opportunity of charging the majority with neglecting the business of Congress, but the effort cannot fail to recoil on themselves. REMARKS.

COTTON.—This article continues to arrive freely, considering the lateness of the season. During the former part of the week, a slight depression was experienced, and the middling and ordinary qualities went down a little. Prices have, however, come up again to those of last week, and we therefore continue our quotations 15 to 20 cents.
